To find articles from magazines and scholarly journals one place to look is Infotrac, which is a large interdisciplinary research database.

From the main BHSU homepage at www.bhsu.edu click on the "Popular Links" link at the top of the page. Now click the "Library Icon".

On the library home under the left column "Browse Databases" click the link "View All".

You will be directed to an alphabetically organized list of databases, scroll down the list until you reach Infotrac, and then click on the link.

You will then be directed to the Thomson Gale list of databases.

For our search example we are going to click the select all box, followed by clicking submit.

You will then be directed to the basic search screen.

You can enter search terms in the search box next to the word find.

You can also search for words in subject, keyword, or the entire document.

If you want more search options click the more search options link.

There you will see various ways to limit your search including: full text, peer reviewed, publication, publications with images, publication date, publication title, and publication subject.

OK, let’s type in the “television violence” then click the search button.

On the next screen you will see your search results.

NOTE: A few things about the results page. You can view your results by “magazines”, “academic journals”, “reference”, “news”, or “multimedia” by clicking on the various tabs.

You can also search different databases using your search terms by clicking on the “additional databases” tab.

You can also sort your results by “publication date” or “relevance.”

To view the full text of the article click on the “full text” link below the article’s citation.

To learn how to cite this article click on the “how to cite” tab.
You can mark several of the articles by clicking on the mark box next to the article citation.

For example, I am going to click on several articles.

Then you can click on the “marked items” icon at the top of the search results screen.

Then you can “print” or “e-mail” the list by clicking one of the icons.

You can also search for specific publications by clicking on the “publications” tab.

On the next screen in the search box I am going to look for the journal “People Management.” Type in “People Management.”

On the next screen you will see a box with a link to “People Management” click on this link.

On the next screen you will links to the most recent issues of the journal.

To see past issues use the drop down box and choose a different year.

For example, I am going to choose 2004, there you will see the links to access the journal.

To view a particular volume and issue number simply click on that particular link.

For example, I am going to choose May 6th, 2004.

On the next screen you will see links to the articles within this journal.

If you need help searching this database you can click the “help” button towards the top of the screen.
